40 Main Street
Goshen, MA 01032

Evelyn Culver, Coordinator

ematkc@aol.com

Here we are in the old winter months, enjoying a little snow and wind. Just keep your eyes straight ahead for that sunny spring weather. With Covid still out there and the winter weather unpredictable, it is always nice to stay in our warm homes.

We just want you to remember that you are not alone if you have your phone. Over the last couple of years, our council has tried to stay connected with our seniors by calling up to say Hello. If we have not called you, we are sorry, but please just give one of us a call or just call a friend or relative to say Hi and start a conversation with them. It will warm your heart and give you something to think about.

If you need something, say something. Please do not hesitate to contact one of us.

The Age Friendly group has equipment such as walkers, tub chairs etc. and will get them to you if you need something Contact Henrietta: 268-7465.

Cell Phone Workshop

The Goshen Library and the COA will be hosting a cell phone workshop on January 15th from 10am to 1pm at the town hall. This is open to anyone, but you must register ahead of time. If you are under sixty, you will have to pay $5.00 for the informational booklet. Masks are required. Snow date will be January 20th. All the information and who to contact is in the next column, but if you have other questions, please call Evelyn: 268-3316.

Want to catch up with your grandchildren who tell you using an Android smartphone is simple and easy? The fact is, figuring how to use all of the features of a smartphone is often not obvious at all. Join us at the workshop, hang out with friends and have fun "learning the ropes".

- Understand some basics of getting your phone to do what you want it to do.
- Do things you have been told it can do but you have not figured out how.
- Understand your phone enough to feel comfortable with using it for new tasks and activities
- Understand what you should be wary of.
- Identify ways to find out more about your phone.

Some of the issues to be covered include how to:

- Get your pictures off your phone and onto your computer
- Find and install apps
- Determine whether you can use it for banking, bill paying, accessing medical records and reaching your doctor's office or pharmacy.

Interested in coming? Please call the workshop facilitator, Peg Whalen, at 413-404-4566 or email pegwhalenworkshops@gmail.com to register by 5pm on January 13th. It would be helpful to know your cell/smartphone number and your email address. You will receive a short set of questions that help the organizer prepare to make the workshop most useful for your skills and interests. * Please note: this workshop will not cover how to troubleshoot an ongoing problem with your phone or how to fix broken parts of your phone.

Condolences go out to the family of Chet Lulek who passed away in November. Chet did many things for Goshen and was on several committees. He will be missed.

It is wonderful that Joan Griswold is back running her online muscle strength classes. She recuperated quickly because she has so many good friends cheering her on. She will be incredibly happy the day she can open her classes back up in the town hall.

Christmas Carolers

Lorraine Brisson, Rosemarie Clark, CJ Stevenson, Georgia McCarthy, Nancy Wood and Peter and Nancy Madru from Montgomery, Kathy Boisvert and Don, aka Santa, Boisvert enjoyed a evening of caroling to Goshen Seniors.

Library News A special thank you!

Thank you, Rosemarie Clark, for your many years of dedicated service to our Town Library. As a library trustee and at one time, its chair, Rosemarie brought lots of energy, creativity, and new ideas to all the Library meetings and was always willing to go the extra mile in helping out with special programs and presentations.

Rosemarie, for all your contributions as library trustee, the board and the community are forever grateful!

3G Cellular Network Service is Ending: what it means, when it will happen & what you may need to do

All 3G devices will lose cellular service in 2022 as service providers begin to turn off their 3G networks in the United States.

How do I know if I have a 3G device?

Carriers say they've been alerting customers who are on older phones that services are ending by sending a combination of texts, letters, phone calls and emails. If you have a service plan and have not heard from your carrier, log into your account to double check. If you're unsure, or wondering about an old device, call your service provider to verify whether or not you have a device that will only operate on 3G cellular service and can NOT connect to 4G or 5G cellular service.

Has your COA newsletter been arriving later than you'd like? Jump on our email list in lieu of, or in addition to the paper copy! Just send Kristen an email at regionalcoanews@gmail.com and you'll be sure to get the news on time every month.

Seniors Aware of Fire Education

Well, it is January and it is getting colder and staying warm may be difficult for many of us who live in older houses. You may be tempted to buy and use a space heater. Here are few ways to use one as safely as possible:

- ⇒ When buying one, look for a heater that has been tested and labeled by a nationally recognized testing company, like "UL" (Underwriter's Laboratories).
- ⇒ Keep the heater 3 feet away from drapes, furniture or other flammable materials.
- ⇒ Put the heater on a level surface away from areas where someone might bump into it and knock it over.
- ⇒ Avoid using extension cords. If you must use one, make sure it is heavy duty and marked with a power rating that is at least as high as that on the heater's label.
- ⇒ Never leave a space heater unattended or running while you sleep.
- ⇒ Keep electric heaters away from water. Never use them near a sink or in a bathroom.
- ⇒ Don't even think about using unvented kerosene heaters; they are illegal here.

Have a warm and SAFE winter!

Would you like to receive your newsletter, in color, by email instead of snail mail?

If so, please email Kristen at regionalcoanews@gmail.com to be put on the email list. Include your address so I will know which mailing list to take you off of. Thanks!

Winter Games?

OK, maybe this is weird, but a possible indoor activity for you is to take some financial literacy quizzes with your family, especially the younger members. Surveys show (you know the "They Say" deal) that we are very poor in some basic financial knowledge.

So what, you ask? Well, knowledge is power. Having good financial knowledge can help a person avoid bad debt and defaults on loans. On a positive note, it can help build an emergency savings fund, earn higher interest on investments, and plan to meet financial goals. Overall, that knowledge can help get and keep enough money to be able to do what a person wants to do.

A major investment firm asked more than 2000 people questions in eight different retirement categories. The average grade that people got right was only 30 percent. No one got all the questions right and the highest overall grade was 79 percent. Here is that quiz – give it a try!

www.newretirement.com/retirement/retirement-financial-literacy-can-you-do-better-than-average/

There are many financial literacy quizzes online; this one is from the AARP:

This is a well-rounded set of questions that I recommend. From there, you could search for many other quizzes to take, starting with this page: www.proprofs.com/quiz-school/topic/financial-literacy

Enjoy your winter!

Dealing with Dementia: How to cope

by Jan Gibeau

Living with dementia often means having to cope with the stigma attached to the word itself. Just as we are reluctant to talk about the changes happening in our lives, our friends and family struggle to find the right words to use when talking with you. There is no right or wrong way, of course. Many of the questions and fears that arise are hard to discuss when friends and family members are also trying hard to be comforting and reassuring at the same time. Even though the changes you and they have been noticing have probably been there for a while now, being formally diagnosed with dementia can feel sudden and forbidding. This is time to "think in slices, not loaves". It's important to keep in mind that people living with dementia can still continue to live a full life for years following their diagnosis. Even in the face of this fact, many misconceptions about dementia make life harder for everyone. When you forget something, lose something, can't find a word you're trying to use, you wonder, "Are all these events getting tossed into a new box labelled 'person with dementia'? Am I being seen as 'less than' by friends and family?" Then you realize that you, too, may have already bought into the stigma and it's time to kick it away. It may take more than a few kicks.

One of the most powerful ways to debunk the stigma is to ask and listen to others who are themselves living through the same thing. Listening and talking helps you and your friends as well as your family learn what kinds of things people have experienced and what they have found helpful. It also helps to know that you are not in this alone. Here are a few examples of what experiences people have shared; addressing both what can be painful and what can help:

- When I tell someone I have dementia and I have trouble remembering, people say 'Oh I have trouble remembering too'. It makes me feel like they are being competitive or just not listening. I would like to say, 'You have memory problems? Call me when you forget something 15 times. Losing your keys is nothing compared to losing your house'.
- I often feel people aren't really listening, but are making assumptions. I want people to know that there are times when I can't get through a single task because I can't keep the thought of what I was doing in my mind. When people don't listen, it's upsetting. Ask me a question about what's it like, don't compare your experience to mine.
- People are uncomfortable with the level of difficulty I am having. Perhaps this is why they emphasize that I look normal and talk well.
- I'm often told, 'You don't look like you have dementia'. No one says, 'You don't look like you have diabetes'.
- Many folks seem to think if someone has dementia, the person's gone.

- When you have dementia, you are just a person who has something to deal with like any other disease. You wouldn't leave someone behind if they have COPD and needed some extra time to walk.
- With dementia, I need people to give me extra time to respond. Even though others are trying to be reassuring, they may not realize that their comments leave you feeling hurt and upset.

What are some ideas that people thought would be more helpful?

- It helps to not start a sentence by saying "don't you remember?"
- It helps when someone asks, "If you get stuck, would you rather I helped you or waited?"
- It helps if family and friends and others understand my condition.
- When people understand that I can't get a word, I will describe what word I am looking for. It becomes a group effort and can be fun. I feel we are working together.
- When I give people permission to tell me if something seems out of the ordinary with me.
- When I say, "Stop me if you've heard this". It makes the other person feel comfortable.
- People want to get me organized. It works better if I do the organizing. This helps me to remember where things are and generally makes more sense than another person's idea of organization.
- It helps when my friends and family point out my strengths and achievements, not just instances of forgetting or losing something.

It helps when you and others close to you recognize that you are still you, and the goal is to preserve that as long as possible. It's also important that you think about what you would like and let people know. It's important to make a customized plan that's suited to your personal wishes.

There is so much information online dealing with dementia and they all have value, but it can be hard to find a clear and succinct list of facts, issues and good tips in making a plan. I have found that one of the best resources to begin with is the Memory Handbook created by the Alzheimer's Society in the UK. You can explore more by going to their website (Alzheimers.org.UK) It is written in a way that "get's to the point" in a down to earth way. Worth reading! The Alzheimer's Association website provides access to detailed, in depth articles that address most of the concerns or questions that come up.

3G Service to End in 2022

Major cellular providers plan to phase out 3G coverage beginning in early 2022. What this means is that if you use older devices that rely on 3G networks, the use of your devices will be impacted. This includes cell phones, tablets, emergency/life alert and other medical devices, home security systems, among other technologies. Many providers are reaching out to customers who will be affected by this change; if you are trying to determine if your device uses this older technology, contact the provider or carrier for the service.

Reminder:

SNAP recipients can save an extra $40-$80 on their EBT card for fresh fruits and vegetables at eligible locations.

This is supported by the Healthy Incentives Program (HIP), a Massachusetts state program where SNAP recipients get at least $40 of extra SNAP money every month to spend on local fruits and vegetables. That means if you have SNAP, you automatically have HIP! Two of the farms are: Crabapple Farm, 100 Bryant St. in Chesterfield, and Crimson and Clover, 215 Spring St. in Florence. Shop at these farm locations with your SNAP/EBT card, and get at least $40 extra to spend through the HIP program. Note: you must have at least $1 on your SNAP/EBT card when you go and shop; in other words, you need to have a balance on your EBT card in order to earn the HIP incentive.

Start the New Year with Smooth Moves

Winter is here! COVID won't go away. Finding yourself feeling a little "stiff" from staying inside so much? Have you been away from exercise and find yourself yearning to get your body moving again? Worried about exercise classes that are more vigorous than you're ready for? If you answered yes to any of these questions, we invite you to join our new class series called Smooth Moves. It's a good class for relaxing, stretching out and feeling good. The program will provide you the opportunity to remain seated in a chair while inviting your body to join you in some basic movements. Joan Griswold, a very knowledgeable instructor, has created this program to gently guide you through movement oriented to increasing your range of movement and flexibility without pain and discomfort. No special equipment necessary.

This class will be offered on Friday mornings at 9:15am at the Chesterfield Community Center, 400 Main Rd. Would you be interested in participating in person or prefer a virtual offering? All in person programs require participants to wear masks regardless of vaccination status. For more information, contact Joan Griswold at (413) 268-7985 or joan@bybhealth.com
