SAVE THE DATE!

January Luncheon

When: January 12, 2022
(unless otherwise restricted by the Board of Health)

Time: 12 noon
Where: Plainfield Town Hall
Menu: Chili con carne (meat and meatless choices)

The COA luncheons continue to be a success. We would love to have you join us for our January dinner as we celebrate a start to a new year. If possible, bring a side dish to go with the chili. This will be a perfect opportunity to catch up with one another after the holidays and enjoy a wonderful meal together.

Remember we still require proof of vaccination and wearing a mask when not eating in order to attend these luncheons as our way of insuring everyone present is protected and comfortable meeting together in the dining hall.

COA Luncheons

The December holiday luncheon was a huge success with a full house. It turns out "the more the merrier" is applicable during the holidays but also works well throughout the year. Phil Alessio provided a scrumptious beef roast, and everyone donated their favorite holiday side dishes. Musical entertainment was offered by Matt Marotte and Don McMahon. We all joined in for a delightful holiday musical sing-along.

There wasn't an empty seat in the house.

Suggestions For COA Day Trips

We are still looking for suggestions for day trips that we could organize for the warmer months of the year or maybe you have some ideas about holding programs right here at home. If there is (continued on next page) something you would like to do, please place it in the suggestion box provided in the kiosk at the Town Hall. All requests will be considered.

Plainfield Walkability

Along with Joan Griswold, several members in Plainfield are looking into the feasibility of creating walking routes in Plainfield. This group is planning another Zoom meeting on January 10th at 6:30 pm. Anyone interested in joining this group is more than welcome. Please contact Sue Honneus for more info at shonneus@town.plainfield.ma.us

Medical Equipment Swap

Remember, the Plainfield COA has medical equipment available. The inventory includes wheelchairs, walkers, crutches and canes, shower chairs, raised toilet seats and free-standing commodes plus assorted splints and braces, pedal exercisers, bed guards, sox assists and trekking poles. Call Susan Pearson at 634-0025 for further information or to borrow some equipment. If there is something we do not have, Ashfield has additional equipment. Call Deb Scott at 413-628-4547 or email her at cbbuilders95@yahoo.com

Seniors Aware of Fire Education

Well, it is January and it is getting colder and staying warm may be difficult for many of us who live in older houses. You may be tempted to buy and use a space heater.

Here are few ways to use one as safely as possible:

- ⇒ When buying one, look for a heater that has been tested and labeled by a nationally recognized testing company, like "UL" (Underwriter's Laboratories).
- ⇒ Keep the heater 3 feet away from drapes, furniture or other flammable materials.
- ⇒ Put the heater on a level surface away from areas where someone might bump into it and knock it over.
- ⇒ Avoid using extension cords. If you must use one, make sure it is heavy duty and marked with a power rating that is at least as high as that on the heater's label.
- ⇒ Never leave a space heater unattended or running while you sleep.
- ⇒ Keep electric heaters away from water. Never use them near a sink or in a bathroom.
- ⇒ Don't even think about using unvented kerosene heaters; they are illegal here.

Have a warm and SAFE winter!

Would you like to receive your newsletter, in color, by email instead of snail mail?

If so, please email Kristen at regionalcoanews@gmail.com to be put on the email list. Include your address so I will know which mailing list to take you off of. Thanks!

Winter Games?

OK, maybe this is weird, but a possible indoor activity for you is to take some financial literacy quizzes with your family, especially the younger members. Surveys show (you know the "They Say" deal) that we are very poor in some basic financial knowledge.

So what, you ask? Well, knowledge is power. Having good financial knowledge can help a person avoid bad debt and defaults on loans. On a positive note, it can help build an emergency savings fund, earn higher interest on investments, and plan to meet financial goals. Overall, that knowledge can help get and keep enough money to be able to do what a person wants to do.

A major investment firm asked more than 2000 people questions in eight different retirement categories. The average grade that people got right was only 30 percent. No one got all the questions right and the highest overall grade was 79 percent. Here is that quiz – give it a try!

www.newretirement.com/retirement/retirement-financial-literacy-can-you-do-better-than-average/

There are many financial literacy quizzes online; this one is from the AARP:

This is a well-rounded set of questions that I recommend. From there, you could search for many other quizzes to take, starting with this page: www.proprofs.com/quiz-school/topic/financial-literacy

Enjoy your winter!

Dealing with Dementia: How to cope

by Jan Gibeau

Living with dementia often means having to cope with the stigma attached to the word itself. Just as we are reluctant to talk about the changes happening in our lives, our friends and family struggle to find the right words to use when talking with you. There is no right or wrong way, of course. Many of the questions and fears that arise are hard to discuss when friends and family members are also trying hard to be comforting and reassuring at the same time. Even though the changes you and they have been noticing have probably been there for a while now, being formally diagnosed with dementia can feel sudden and forbidding. This is time to "think in slices, not loaves". It's important to keep in mind that people living with dementia can still continue to live a full life for years following their diagnosis. Even in the face of this fact, many misconceptions about dementia make life harder for everyone. When you forget something, lose something, can't find a word you're trying to use, you wonder, "Are all these events getting tossed into a new box labelled 'person with dementia'? Am I being seen as 'less than' by friends and family?" Then you realize that you, too, may have already bought into the stigma and it's time to kick it away. It may take more than a few kicks.

One of the most powerful ways to debunk the stigma is to ask and listen to others who are themselves living through the same thing. Listening and talking helps you and your friends as well as your family learn what kinds of things people have experienced and what they have found helpful. It also helps to know that you are not in this alone. Here are a few examples of what experiences people have shared; addressing both what can be painful and what can help:

- When I tell someone I have dementia and I have trouble remembering, people say 'Oh I have trouble remembering too'. It makes me feel like they are being competitive or just not listening. I would like to say, 'You have memory problems? Call me when you forget something 15 times. Losing your keys is nothing compared to losing your house'.
- I often feel people aren't really listening, but are making assumptions. I want people to know that there are times when I can't get through a single task because I can't keep the thought of what I was doing in my mind. When people don't listen, it's upsetting. Ask me a question about what's it like, don't compare your experience to mine.
- People are uncomfortable with the level of difficulty I am having. Perhaps this is why they emphasize that I look normal and talk well.
- I'm often told, 'You don't look like you have dementia'. No one says, 'You don't look like you have diabetes'.
- Many folks seem to think if someone has dementia, the person's gone.

- When you have dementia, you are just a person who has something to deal with like any other disease. You wouldn't leave someone behind if they have COPD and needed some extra time to walk.
- With dementia, I need people to give me extra time to respond. Even though others are trying to be reassuring, they may not realize that their comments leave you feeling hurt and upset.

What are some ideas that people thought would be more helpful?

- It helps to not start a sentence by saying "don't you remember?"
- It helps when someone asks, "If you get stuck, would you rather I helped you or waited?"
- It helps if family and friends and others understand my condition.
- When people understand that I can't get a word, I will describe what word I am looking for. It becomes a group effort and can be fun. I feel we are working together.
- When I give people permission to tell me if something seems out of the ordinary with me.
- When I say, "Stop me if you've heard this". It makes the other person feel comfortable.
- People want to get me organized. It works better if I do the organizing. This helps me to remember where things are and generally makes more sense than another person's idea of organization.
- It helps when my friends and family point out my strengths and achievements, not just instances of forgetting or losing something.

It helps when you and others close to you recognize that you are still you, and the goal is to preserve that as long as possible. It's also important that you think about what you would like and let people know. It's important to make a customized plan that's suited to your personal wishes.

There is so much information online dealing with dementia and they all have value, but it can be hard to find a clear and succinct list of facts, issues and good tips in making a plan. I have found that one of the best resources to begin with is the Memory Handbook created by the Alzheimer's Society in the UK. You can explore more by going to their website (Alzheimers.org.UK) It is written in a way that "get's to the point" in a down to earth way. Worth reading! The Alzheimer's Association website provides access to detailed, in depth articles that address most of the concerns or questions that come up.

3G Service to End in 2022

Major cellular providers plan to phase out 3G coverage beginning in early 2022. What this means is that if you use older devices that rely on 3G networks, the use of your devices will be impacted. This includes cell phones, tablets, emergency/life alert and other medical devices, home security systems, among other technologies. Many providers are reaching out to customers who will be affected by this change; if you are trying to determine if your device uses this older technology, contact the provider or carrier for the service.

Reminder:

SNAP recipients can save an extra $40-$80 on their EBT card for fresh fruits and vegetables at eligible locations.

This is supported by the Healthy Incentives Program (HIP), a Massachusetts state program where SNAP recipients get at least $40 of extra SNAP money every month to spend on local fruits and vegetables. That means if you have SNAP, you automatically have HIP! Two of the farms are: Crabapple Farm, 100 Bryant St. in Chesterfield, and Crimson and Clover, 215 Spring St. in Florence. Shop at these farm locations with your SNAP/EBT card, and get at least $40 extra to spend through the HIP program. Note: you must have at least $1 on your SNAP/EBT card when you go and shop; in other words, you need to have a balance on your EBT card in order to earn the HIP incentive.

Start the New Year with Smooth Moves

Winter is here! COVID won't go away. Finding yourself feeling a little "stiff" from staying inside so much? Have you been away from exercise and find yourself yearning to get your body moving again? Worried about exercise classes that are more vigorous than you're ready for? If you answered yes to any of these questions, we invite you to join our new class series called Smooth Moves. It's a good class for relaxing, stretching out and feeling good. The program will provide you the opportunity to remain seated in a chair while inviting your body to join you in some basic movements. Joan Griswold, a very knowledgeable instructor, has created this program to gently guide you through movement oriented to increasing your range of movement and flexibility without pain and discomfort. No special equipment necessary.

This class will be offered on Friday mornings at 9:15am at the Chesterfield Community Center, 400 Main Rd. Would you be interested in participating in person or prefer a virtual offering? All in person programs require participants to wear masks regardless of vaccination status. For more information, contact Joan Griswold at (413) 268-7985 or joan@bybhealth.com

Life in the Artic National Wildlife Refuge By Fran Ryan

Sunday, January 23rd at 2pm
Chesterfield Community Center, 400 Main Rd.

On January 23 at 2pm, Fran Ryan, well known for her captivating educational programs on the lives and habits of wildlife, will be presenting in person at the Chesterfield Community Center. Fran will discuss some of the wildlife that inhabit ANWR, how they adapt to their surroundings and the importance of the ANWR.

**Given that it's cold both here and in the Artic, Hot Chocolate will be provided!*

Peg Whalen presents: iPhone Basics Workshop

Monday January 31st
2:30 to 5:00pm
Chesterfield Community Center, 400 Main Rd.

There is still a strong interest by people wanting to learn about their iPhones. Peg will be conducting another workshop that will cover the following issues:

- Understand some basics of getting your phone to do what you want it to do.
- Feel comfortable enough with your phone to try apps and features.
- Do things you have been told it can do but you have not figured out how.
- Ways to learn more about your phone on your own.

Interested in coming?

Please reserve a spot by January 21st. Call Peg Whalen, workshop presenter, at 413-404-4566. Leave a voicemail or text with your name, email address, cell phone version (e.g. iPhone 7, iPhone SE, iPhone 12) and your home or cell phone number.
